Hansen gets his kicks playing Hendrix

Randy Hansen's rendition of 'Jimi Hendrix machine gun'

By JUAN RODRIGUEZ
of The Gazette

"It's hard to describe how much fun I have doing what I'm doing," says 24-year-old Randy Hansen, who makes his living dressing up and playing like the late, great rock guitarist Jimi Hendrix.

"It's the biggest kick I get out of life," he says.

Hansen, who begins a three-night engagement at Le Pretzel Enchaine tonight, doesn't particularly like the word "clone," which has been used to describe the Beatlemania troupe (that appeared locally last month).

"The word is so loosely thrown around these days that nobody really knows what it means. But I don't care what they call me."

Hansen comes from Hendrix's hometown, Seattle and grew up with the Hendrix mystique.

He idol died from a drug overdose nine years ago. These days Hansen is in the middle of a 78-city tour that, according to reviews, reveals him as a remarkably accurate impersonator.

What does Hendrix's father think of him?

"He really liked my show a lot. In fact, we were on an elevator after a performance and I could see the tears running from his eyes. We were just about to step out when he said, 'After you, Jimi.'

"That's something I'll never forget."

Does Hansen feel his career can only reach a dead-end because of its reliance on someone else's style, a dilemma that has troubled Montreal guitarist Frank Marino (of Mahogany Rush), who gained fame by playing uncannily like Hendrix?

"No, I don't feel trapped as a person. I was speaking to Frank about it and he warned me not to go into it unless it was for good.

"The difference is that Frank writes his own stuff and sounds like Hendrix. When I'm on stage I just try to get as close to Hendrix as I can. I've got his music running through my head all the time."

Hansen, who is white, spends about an hour before each show darkening his face and frizzing his hair like Hendrix.

Asked if fans approach him to ask what Hendrix was really like, he replies: "I really don't have that problem. Backstage I look like just another roadie."

However, Hansen is planning to issue records under his own name and style, which is influenced by the likes of John McLaughlin, Joe Walsh and Todd Rundgren. Does he worry about his 'real' style not being as accepted as his Hendrix routine?

"It's something I'm real interested in finding out. However, if it doesn't work, it'd be alright. A lot of acts go after that golden ring, and if they don't succeed, it seems to tear them apart. I wouldn't want that to happen to me."

Finally, does he feel scared of ending up like Hendrix?

"Everybody's got to die sooner or later. As long as it's a natural death I don't mind."

YOU BE THE CRITIC

The column where readers have their say

Rodriguez hits upon rock 'n' roll problem

Everyone is attacking Mr. Rodrigues for his negative remarks about some concerts. However, if you enjoyed a concert, that does not make it artistically and critically sound. A group that breathe fire and someone who wails "Do You Think I'm Sexy?" cannot be considered artists in the true sense of rock 'n' roll.

I believe Mr. Rodrigues has hit upon one of the problems of rock and roll today. There are not that many good rock 'n' roll groups that perform well. The best groups seldom come to Montreal. Here we are no Neil Young, no The Who, no Rolling Stones and only the occasional Springsteen and Southside Johnny.

Mr. Rodrigues is giving us an objective point of view at a concert where all the fans like the group. It will take a lot to disappoint the fans but, as always, it will take little to disappoint the critic. Mr. Rodrigues refuses to drop below his dignity.

May The Gazette print some letters of this viewpoint to show that some of us actually understand Mr. Rodrigues' objectivity.

We're deeply perturbed by those record reviews

Juan Rodrigues' record reviews of Aug. 24 deeply perturbed us. He declared that Ritchie Blackmore is an over-rated guitarist with a fuzzed guitar. He doesn't even own a fuzz. Even funnier is the fact that his peers selected him along with Howe, Page and Santana as being among the four best rock guitarists in the world (Guitar Player, Dec. 78).

Rodriguez hit the heights again by proclaiming George Thorgood as the best rock guitarist without a rhythm player. Chuck Berry was performing those licks 20 years ago. Frank Marino performs the same stuff with his teeth.

We feel Rodriguez is misleading your readers with judgments on subjects of which his knowledge is obviously limited. (I.e. guitar players). Montreal now has a pack of 12-year-olds who think that the greatest guitar player is a guy who can undoubtedly perform but whose albums consist of Chuck Berry repeated over and over again ad nauseum.

Kiss group is disgusting the way it acts, dresses

I am surprised to see that The Gazette has yet to publish a letter that defends Juan Rodriguez. After all, the purpose of any editorial page is to present opposite views on the same issue to stimulate the readers' perception of that issue.

I agree with Juan Rodrigue that the rock group Kiss is "a blatantly exploitative act." "I think they are disgusting by the way they act and dress and a dishonor to the word "entertainment."

I am sure that 10 years ago, their act would have been banned — and it is still a great idea.

I'm shocked by criticism of Chorus Line musical

In my opinion, Mr. Bruce Bailey has a lot to learn about reviewing theatre. When a play like A Chorus Line finally comes to Montreal or Ottawa, the audiences are very excited about the fact that we can finally see some "pizazz" and professionalism.

After seeing the play a couple of times, I was shocked at the criticism that got into your newspaper and I was very insulted when I was called a "sucker" for going to see this wonderful play.

There must be something wrong somewhere, because the play has been open on Broadway for four years, playing to standing room only and the album had record sales. Obviously, this so-called critic has no idea about the life of an actor or else he wouldn't have said what he did about them. ("self-indulgent, exhibitionistic, ego-maniacs.")

The purpose of this play was not to describe dancers as the above but rather as entities that must live from hand to mouth but who have more feelings than the ordinary human being because of their profession.

Being an acting student, I can identify with several characters in the play and I have never seen anybody portray my problems so realistically as they did.

I sincerely hope audiences go to see it and don't pay attention to Mr. Bailey's power-hungry critique.

Was Maureen Peterson at the same concert?

I am just reading an article produced by Maureen Peterson about last night's Pops Concert by the Montreal Symphony Orchestra at the Maurice Richard Arena.

I was at this event, but I can't believe that the author of this article in The Gazette was there. What is said about the orchestra and its conductor is not exact. They were not bad, but surely missed a couple of hours of last-minute rehearsal, to say the least!

Hurteau absolutely flopped the first piece and the 4,000 listeners couldn't hide their displeasure energy she put into her presentation, did very well.

Now, let's talk about Brunet Lapointe. How could Maureen Peterson not say more about his presentation? He sang beautifully and the listeners showed him an evident delight.

The public needs correct information. Stop accepting this kind of unfair and false talk: it badly spoils the quality of The Gazette.
